Synopsis:

The business case for improving our delegation skills is compelling. All too often, we are able to identify many carefully constructed reasons why delegation is not possible in a given circumstance - lack of time, desire for perfection, lack of faith in the abilities of our staff, fear of failure and so on. Deep down, however, we all know these are excuses. The purpose of leadership is to create more leaders, not more followers. This participative workshop will explore the steps involved in Effective Delegation and help you to identify the sacred cows that you need to slay in order that you may maximise your leverage and unlock the hidden potential of your staff.
