Synopsis:

Seth Godin uses the word “tribe” to describe a group of people who gravitate, engage and then communicate around an “idea”. The idea typically spreads virally to attract other like-minded individuals. Tribes might include religions, clubs, Apple, Facebook, your customer portfolio or even the organisation you work for. This session is all about you, as the leader of your tribe. To thrive as a leader, you need to be an exemplar, a role model in your chosen field, have a strong personal brand and a following of “believers” around your idea. We teach that the key to success is “value to others”. How can people get more benefit from being associated with you? How can you encourage people to gravitate towards your tribe?
